

Solutions for Complex Cases

One small injury ...  costs more than you can imagine.

Functional Capacity Assessment

Estimating Your Worker's Abilities

An FCA is an objective test that measures lifting, carrying, reaching and sustained postures. This comprehensive test provides estimations of the injured worker's abilities and limitations. It does not provide information about whether or not an injured worker can return to his or her specific job. The information derived from an FCA will help the team of the employer, doctor, case managers/QRC, and therapist make objective decisions relating to your complex cases.

USE AN FCA FOR:

Directing Rehab

When a "lost work time injury" prevents the worker from returning to his or her full duty job an FCA will assess the employee's status, and help direct the rehab. This applies to any injury, whether its work related or not.

Lingering Cases

An estimation of a worker's limitations and abilities can facilitate decision making about his or her future employment. An FCA helps bring resolution to cases that appear to have no end in sight.

Job Search

When a catastrophic injury or illness limits employment in your company, the FCA provides objective information that can be helpful in the job search process.
